On June 11, 2020, Senator Martha McSally (R-AZ) introduced a new bill which would reauthorize the Special Diabetes Program for Indians (SDPI) for five years and would raise funding for the program to $200 million per year. The bipartisan bill is cosponsored by Senators Lisa Murkowski (R-AK) and Krysten Sinema (D-AZ).

In support of the bill, NCUIH Executive Director Francys Crevier stated, "Thank you to Senators McSally, Murkowski and Sinema for their continued leadership in helping Indian Country during an essential time. No one should have to choose to between paying for their insulin or paying their rent. Thankfully the Special Diabetes Program for Indians is ensuring access to health care. The vital services provided by the SDPI are invaluable and have proven success in decreasing diabetes prevalence in the American Indian/Alaska Native populations that are most susceptible. As our nation battles a pandemic exacerbated by diabetes, it is imperative that the Special Diabetes Program for Indians be reauthorized for the long-term to ensure better outcomes for the patients and families who depend on this critical care."

American Indians and Alaska Natives (AI/ANs) have a greater chance of having type 2 diabetes than any other group. SDPI is an extremely successful program for both Tribes and for Urban Indian Organizations (UIOs).
