The proposal begins to address the many urgent needs of Indian Country.

On December 14, a bipartisan group of lawmakers released two bills totaling $908 billion that would provide economic relief amid the COVID-19 pandemic, including several Indian Country relief measures. The first bill titled "Emergency Coronavirus Relief Act of 2020," provides $748 billion in unemployment assistance, COVID-19 vaccine funding, health care funding, and other emergency relief. The second bill, "Bipartisan State and Local Support and Small Business Protections Act," allocates $160 billion for state, local, and tribal government aid and liability protection for business.

In summary, the first bill provides the following for IHS, tribal organizations and Urban Indian Organizations (UIOs):

- $1 billion in to IHS in Provider Relief Funds
- $350 million to IHS for COVID-19 testing and contact tracing purposes
- $129 million from CDC to IHS to carry out activities with respect to coronavirus vaccine distribution, administration, and communications
- $185 million set aside for Indian tribes, Tribal organizations, and urban Indian organizations for substance use disorder and behavioral health efforts

On December 4, 2020, NCUIH, NCAI, and NIHB wrote a letter to Congress regarding this COVID-19 package. In the letter, the organizations requested $2 billion in emergency funds to Indian Health Service (IHS) for immediate distribution to Indian Health Service/Tribal Health Program/UIO (I/T/U) system, minimum $1 billion to replenish lost third-party reimbursements across the I/T/U system, a minimum five percent I/T/U funding set-aside for vaccine distribution and administration, and long-term reauthorization of the Special Diabetes Program for Indians (SDPI).

Next Steps

- Congress is close to an agreement and will continue negotiations to pass a final relief package.
- NCUIH will continue to monitor developments.

Why is this important to UIOs?

- UIOs need additional funding to provide adequate health care for American Indians/Alaska Natives and ensure successful COVID-19 vaccine distribution and administration.
